What is celiac disease?

Celiac disease is an autoimmune disorder that affects the small intestine. When someone with celiac disease eats gluten, a protein found in wheat, rye, and barley, their immune system attacks the lining of their small intestine. This can damage the small intestine and make it difficult to absorb nutrients from food.

Symptoms of celiac disease

The symptoms of celiac disease can vary from person to person. Some of the most common symptoms include:

- Diarrhea
- Constipation
- Abdominal pain
- Bloating
- Gas
- Weight loss
- Fatigue
- Iron deficiency
- Vitamin B12 deficiency
- Osteoporosis
- Dental problems

Diagnosis of celiac disease

Celiac disease is diagnosed with a blood test and a biopsy of the small intestine. The blood test checks for antibodies that are produced by the immune system when someone eats gluten. The biopsy is a procedure that involves taking a small sample of tissue from the small intestine. The biopsy can show damage to the small intestine that is caused by celiac disease.

Treatment of celiac disease

The only treatment for celiac disease is a strict gluten-free diet. A gluten-free diet means avoiding all foods that contain wheat, rye, and barley. This can be a challenge, but it is essential for people with celiac disease to follow a gluten-free diet in Free Download to manage their condition.
